After-school center adds bullet-resistant materials

BY DAHLIE DONLOE

The Al Wooten Jr. Youth Center has added bullet-resistant materials to the building.

The Al Wooten Jr. Youth Center is located in Los Angeles, just off Olympic Boulevard in South Los Angeles. It was founded by Myrtle Faye Rumph in 1989, and it serves underserved children in the area. The center provides a safe and supportive environment for children to learn, grow, and develop their skills.

Since 2012, the center has been undergoing improvements and renovations, and in 2022, it added bullet-resistant materials to the building. The materials were installed to provide an extra layer of protection for the children and staff. The materials were chosen to ensure that the center is safe and secure for all those who use it.

The installation was completed with the help of the center's staff, who worked closely with the designers and installers to ensure that the materials were installed correctly. The materials were installed in several areas of the building, including the main entryway, the administrative offices, and the classrooms.

The center is now equipped to handle any threat that may arise, and the children and staff can feel safe and secure in their environment. The center is proud to provide a safe and supportive place for children to learn, grow, and develop their skills, and the addition of the bullet-resistant materials is a testament to the center's commitment to providing the best possible environment for its students.

Reading to Kids wants to enrich your young lives

BY DARLENE DONLOE

Reading to Kids is a program that offers reading clubs to underserved children.

Reading to Kids is a program that offers reading clubs to underserved children. The program was founded by Robert Orchard, who wanted to provide a safe and supportive environment for children to read and learn. The program has been growing in popularity, and it now serves children in many different locations.

The program offers reading clubs to children in schools, libraries, and other community centers. The clubs are led by volunteers who read books to children on a regular basis. The volunteers are dedicated to making a difference in the lives of these children.

The program has been successful in improving reading skills among the children, and it has also had a positive impact on the communities where it operates. The program has received support from many different groups, including foundations and corporations.

The program is open to all children, and it is free to participate. The program is led by volunteers who are dedicated to making a difference in the lives of these children. The program is a great way to get involved in your community and make a difference in the lives of children.

Reading to Kids volunteers read books to children to help improve their reading skills. The program is open to all children, and it is free to participate. The program is led by volunteers who are dedicated to making a difference in the lives of these children. The program is a great way to get involved in your community and make a difference in the lives of children.